Dear Hiring Manager,

Thank you for reviewing my application for the QA Engineer position. After looking over the position and the company, I feel that I could be a good fit at Hungryroot.

My passion is software quality, and I have a keen eye for making sure that the user experience and functionality of the software I'm testing is top-notch. I am a leader in testing by inspiring other QA Engineers and project stakeholders to be innovative while making something great. I learned this everyday while working for Apple as a Quality Assurance Engineer. While there, I interacted with users through bug and feedback reports. I consider myself an advocate for the user in every step of development.

I love helping others learn, and helping get the right information into their hands. I have a successful YouTube channel that I provide tech training for free, which has nearly 5000 subscribers (a big feat for a small channel). And my most recent position as Senior QA at mmhmm provided even more hands on experience, as I was in charge of producing the company-wide "all-hands" videos.

While at SurveyMonkey, I coordinated release testing between developers and QA staff. I gained a reputation as a dependable QA leader who effectively balanced competing priorities in high-pressure technical environments while partnering with a wide variety of multi-functional team members and ensuring the planning, design, and implementation of QA testing. I developed project management and honed quality assurance skills, using my organizational skills to develop test plans, assisted in the development of automated testing, and prevented bugs from being released.

My resume is attached with a detailed listing of my past experience, results, and accomplishments. I am an employee who has a proven track record in QA testing and product development, which I feel will contribute to the success of your team. Please do not hesitate to contact me at your earliest convenience to discuss how my skills can help Hungryroot's development process.

Sincerely,
Matt Troutman
