Dear Hiring Manager,

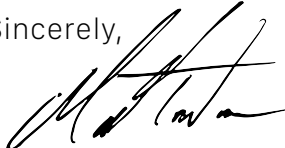

Thank you for reviewing my application for the Quality Engineer III position. After reviewing the requirements I feel that I could be a good fit at Nike. I love the Nike brand and have for many years. (Plus, my favorite pair of shoes is a pair of orange Converse high-tops)

My passion is software quality, and I have a keen eye for making sure that the customer experience and functionality of the software I'm testing is top-notch. I am a leader in testing by inspiring other QA Engineers and project leaders to be innovative while making something phenomenal. I learned this everyday while working for Apple as a Quality Assurance Engineer. While there, I interacted with customers through bug and feedback reports. I consider myself an advocate for the customer in every step of development.

While at SurveyMonkey, I coordinated release testing between developers and QA staff. I gained a reputation as a dependable QA leader who balanced competing priorities. I developed solid project management and honed my quality assurance skills. I helped develop test plans, assisted in the development of automated testing, and prevented bugs from being released.

I've always had a love of video products that goes back to the original iMac. I've been editing anything I could into a video ever since. I have a semi-successful YouTube channel where I provide tech training for free. And my most recent position as Senior QA at mmhmm provided even more hands on experience, as I was producer and host of the company-wide "all-hands" videos.

My resume is attached with a detailed listing of my past experience, results, and accomplishments. I am an employee who has a proven track record in QA testing and product development. I hope that I can lend my skills to the Nike Team. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Matt Troutman
